Odin helps prove that the clothes do, in fact, make the man. (PHIL S. KROPOTH)

Menswear: Odin

Co-owners Eddy Chai and Paul Birardi's downtown locations are one-stop shops for the best in today's men's style. Odin's mix of accessories and clothes have cultivated a devoted following for labels like Rag & Bone, Cheap Monday, Comme des Garçons, Engineered Garments, Trovata and more. While the credit card's out, why not dress up your apartment as well, with their smart coffee table books, candles and trinkets that easily extend the cool aesthetic from closet space to living space.

328 E. 11th St., 212-475-0666 or 199 Lafayette St., 212-966-0026

Dandies' delight: Michael Andrews Bespoke. (RJ MICKELSON/AMNY)

"Affordable" bespoke shop: Michael Andrews Bespoke

A buzzword of late, bespoke has gained new clothing currency in New York's luxury retail scene. But with the economy on less than fit grounds, dandies of the city might want to take their measurements to Michael Andrews, a LES boutique specializing in custom suits that would make Saville Row proud and at prices that won't have you skipping rent. 20 Clinton St., 212-677-1755

Best flea market: Brooklyn Flea

The brainchild of Brownstoner's Jonathan Butler, Brooklyn Flea counts more than 200 vendors selling everything from vintage gear to music and, thankfully, no tube socks. Open since April, the Flea is complemented each Sunday by a bike valet service, Red Hook food vendors and various bake sales.

Bishop Loughlin Memorial High School, 176 Lafayette Ave., Brooklyn

Quirky gifts: Fred Flare

FF's shop of all things cute and offbeat has existed for 10 years only as a virtual reality — until now. Owners Chris Bick and Keith Carollo have moved their pop paradise to an actual brick-and-mortar boutique opening Friday. Expect the usual bevy of giddy gifts — Lego iPod speakers, cheeseburger phones and retro accessories — that make perfect presents for all occasions.

31 Meserole Ave., Brooklyn, Phone TBD

Shoes: Soula

A former Barneys buyer, owner Rick Owens knows a thing or two about shoes. A well-curated mix for women, men and kids, Soula unites form and function — a rare combo for a city filled with gals in tortuous heels. The opening of a second shop in Park Slope proves Owens' retail eye is as ambitious as it is successful.

185 Smith St., Brooklyn, 718-834-8423 or 184 Fifth Ave., 718-230-0038

Vegan handbags: Mooshoes

No need to go vegan to appreciate these offerings, including brands such as Montreal's Matt + Nat, California's Big Buddha and Portland-based Queenbee Creations. And, to boot, vegan products are a cheaper — though just as chic — alternative to leather.

78 Orchard St., 212-254-6512

Home goods: Scandinavian Grace

Move over Ikea: Grace brings a Nordic aesthetic that's anything but bland. Think quirky pieces, from sea pelt blankets to Taika dinnerware and Marimeko prints to bold conceptual lamps.

167 N. Ninth St., Brooklyn, 718-384-7886

Underwear/lingerie: Journelle

A recent addition to the luxury lingerie scene, Journelle's interior space, with its lavender hues and dark wood (not to mention lovely sized change rooms with flattering lighting), complement its sophisticated stock — think Myla, Stella McCartney and upcoming designers Lola Haze and The Lake and the Stars. Look for wardrobe essentials, as well as playful items such as feather ticklers and satin eye masks.
